Introduction:

2020 has been a challenging year for the world and Hong Kong, a popular international city, is not an exception. Nevertheless, one could positively see the core advantage of Hong Kong in dealing with new challenges. The HKSAR Government rolled out numbers of tax concession measures to promote investment in and the development of specific sectors. Businesses are refining their business models and upgrading their infrastructures to grasp the new market opportunities. Tax professionals are also actively involved in driving various transformation down the road.

The 2020 Hong Kong Chartered Tax Adviser Conference ("the Conference") will discuss how the Hong Kong Tax System could proactively address the challenges brought about by the fast changing international tax landscape and increased competition from the neighbouring markets, and the impact of BEPS on China and International tax policy under the current economic environment.

The Institute has also extended invitations to prominent speakers from overseas, Mainland China's and Hong Kong's tax authorities including the State Taxation Administration, the Inland Revenue Department of the HKSAR Government and the Chartered Institute of Taxation.

Last year, the Hong Kong Certified Tax Adviser Conference was well received with over 230 participants including Hong Kong government officials, experts in economic and finance industries, accounting and tax practitioners, academics and representatives from other professional bodies.

The Taxation Institute of Hong Kong and Wolters Kluwer jointly publish International Tax Law and Practice which aims to assist students, tax professionals and businessmen to gain a good understanding of international tax law and practice, and prepare students for the Institute's Certified Tax Adviser (CTA) Qualifying Examination Paper 3 – International Tax.

In an increasingly global business environment, individuals and corporations are exposed to taxation in jurisdictions where they are based, operate or from where they derive income. Many jurisdictions impose taxation under domestic tax rules on a tax residence basis, others on a jurisdictional or source basis. International taxation involves not only the study of the interaction between domestic legislation and international regulation to determine the taxing rights and the remedies available to alleviate double taxation, but also transfer pricing regulations to ensure that transactions are conducted on an "arm's length" basis.

The Book includes the most up-to-date international taxation law, principles and practice and will help readers to understand:

- the basic principles of international taxation;
- the difference between economic and international double taxation and be able to demonstrate a thorough understanding of why international double taxation occurs;
- the means by which international double taxation may be avoided; the difference between unilateral and bilateral double taxation relief; the nature of double tax agreements ("DTAs") and how the typical clauses operate; and
- common anti-avoidance provisions in tax legislation to counter types of international tax planning.

Written by seasoned tax practitioners and reviewed by renowned academics and practitioners, International Tax Law and Practice is a comprehensive and up-to-date reference for persons who wish to understand more about international taxation.
